The present invention relates to a MOS semiconductor memory device, and more particularly to a semiconductor memory device having a function of reliably ensuring an access to data of the memory cell at an increased speed. In the field of the semiconductor memory devices, for example, an NAND type flash memory, one in which storage data of a memory cell array is rewritten by using a hot electron injection writing method in which a drain voltage is applied to a memory cell at the time of the writing has been developed. In the NAND type flash memory, as shown in FIG. 1, a plurality of memory cells MCa and MCb are connected in series between a bit line BLa and a bit line BLb and are controlled by one word line WL. Memory cells MCa and MCb are connected in series between a high voltage supply line VCC and a ground potential. A source line selector circuit SLa is connected to the bit line BLa and controls the writing of data in a memory cell MCa or the reading of data in a memory cell MCa
