Just after midnight on Tuesday, a "big ugly spider" crept into the home of a 28-year-old man in southeastern Pennsylvania. The arachnid crawled around his head and became trapped in a bedroom window, necessitating a small-scale bug extraction operation by his roommate. "I was totally freaked out," Stephen Hess, a civil engineer living in West Chester, told the Philadelphia Inquirer. "It was a big spooky spider, and it was big." Hess awoke the next morning to find that the houseplant in his room had a large spider on it. From there, the spider was spotted on the wall and floor of the bedroom. A search of the bedroom revealed no spider and no spiders living under the bed. A student at the University of Pennsylvania helped Hess search the room, turning the lights on and off and searching for other spiders. They didn't find any. But Hess continued to look under the bed. When he looked under the bed a second time, he found the spider.

"You know, it was definitely big
