m0.25s user 1.02s system 0% cpu 0.524 total First of all, this is very encouraging because as you can see, the new sdb command has added only about 4 seconds in a 15 minute time span. The important thing to note here is that the average time for the entire process has dropped to a mere 0.5 second, which is just an astonishing achievement. If we wanted to collect and analyze this new data, we could simply take a screen shot of the graph and then open the graph in LibreOffice Calc, add a new column, and then copy and paste the data into that column. # Run "sdb -v" to view the messages. $ sdb -v Last message: Received sdb version "6.02-6-0" from firmware "v1.0.0" using platform "eagle" by firmware "eagle-v1.0.0" at kernel "kext_gw.kext" at boot time.
