legit i guess you'll have to use a live usb to get into that? Although they may have a way to do it for you: probably someone here can help out more than me or then you can use the terminal to be root Younder: yea, i will live boot. i can get into grub Gladki, ok. Make a new user for your 12.04 installation and copy the whole /home to a new folder under 12.04 Gladki, or to the original /home Gladki, then make a new user for your new 12.04 installation Gladki, then you can move the contents of your home in to the new user's folder Gladki, then boot your new user Gladki, you're going to have to reinstall 12.04 Gladki, Gladki, You may also want to install 'shred' (sudo apt-get install shred) to help you clean up that old stuff (like your old home) Younder: I'm going to log into my router, and switch the server's network id to the new one. as long as my ip hasn't changed, it will work as normal. I'll have to do that this evening. right now, I'm leaving on a trip Younder: you seem to have created a pretty nice web page, thanks for that! Younder: I'm going to go, and have a good night Gladki, it's

Email: Your verified iLok.com user ID: ... You have the option to sign in with your iLok key or use machine ... Register your Ivory software with iLok ... The first time you start iLok, it asks you to confirm your identity by downloading the iLokSecure app, which contains your iLok ID. Confirming your identity is necessary to confirm that you are the owner of the iLok, to ensure that you are the only one who will use it. Also, for your personal security, iLokSecure contains data that can be used to confirm your identity even when you are not using the iLok. fffad4f19a
