The recent growth in the use of the Internet has resulted in a dramatic increase in the volume of traffic on the Internet. This increase in traffic has put enormous stress on the networks of the Internet. One method of mitigating this stress is by increasing the amount of data storage space. Another way is to use file servers, which consolidate all the data of clients. These file servers include multiple hard disk drives, or other types of storage media, that are connected to a back plane. The
