Cavalry Division A cavalry division is a type of military division, usually named for its cavalry arm. Cavalry divisions usually contain a single cavalry brigade, a single mixed cavalry and infantry brigade, or one infantry brigade and a single cavalry brigade. In the British, Polish and Indian Armies, there are also armored cavalry brigades (Armoured Cavalry Division), some of which also contain infantry battalions. History Early cavalry divisions, such as the "Half Horse Artillery Division" of the Union Army in the American Civil War, were not a separate type of division but simply a division that contained two cavalry brigades, each with three batteries of artillery, in
