Caring for cardiovascular patients and their families is a daily challenge for all physicians, especially for internists. Physicians' ability to solve problems is essential to the integration of medical care for cardiovascular patients and their families. The care for patients with cardiac disorders comprises in particular the following, involving patients and their families: diagnosis, understanding the patient's situation, setting and action plan, and follow-up. The study of the care of patients with cardiac disorders in Spain has led to relevant conclusions regarding the definition of the problem by the patient and relatives and the interaction that should take place between the patients and their families. This interaction should be aimed at delivering information, education, discussion of how to understand the patient's situation, the development of a consistent action plan, and, finally, follow-up. This interaction should be part of an innovative method that involves patients and their families and which has resulted in the development of activities oriented to heart disease patients and their families in Spain.President-elect Donald Trump and Russia were the primary subjects of an hour-long discussion at a press conference at Trump Tower. In a wide-ranging discussion, Trump did not show any signs of backtracking from his statement that he was willing to talk to the Russians about all the problems in the world. From CNN: Trump cast doubts on whether Moscow would prove willing to extradite President Vladimir Putin's foe from another country and dismissed stories about him as "fake news." Asked by ABC News' chief anchor George Stephanopoulos to explain why Putin doesn't like Clinton, Trump said, "I think that Putin has an opinion about her — and her husband, and her father." Trump on whether Putin has something on him: "I think that he probably does." When asked about the "fake news" stories of hacking, Trump said: "That's been going on for a long time." "I think it's Russia," Trump said. "And it's probably no different than other places. It's probably no different than Iran, like you say. They hack." When Stephanopoulos said that the hacking could have been done by a man on a four-year contract for $100,000, Trump dismissed that notion. "So, they would have 570a42141b
