After my previous post, the community has been sending me emails and starting discussions about the best way to create the material that will go into the game. I'd like to outline what I am thinking of for the game, and then allow the community to help out in any way they want to. I am thinking of creating the game on the Unreal Engine 4. The game will have a story-driven experience with certain objectives. Some objectives will unlock new characters, items, and stages to explore. Every stage will have a quest that the player must complete. The player will be given the abilities to use multiple weapons at once. There will be a way to customize your weapon or character to make them more fit for your play-style. The ability to customize will also be used to bring the characters back to life after their death. I want the player to start out with a basic weapon and multiple characters. Later on, they will unlock the ability to customize weapons and characters. The game will have a campaign mode with different types of missions to complete. For example: there will be a raid-mission, a mission in which you must defend a place, and a mission that involves obtaining an item. The purpose of the mission will be to determine the type of mission they will unlock for the next part of the game. There will be 4 different types of characters that you can create. The game will feature characters with unique attributes, skills, and abilities. I have created a new Unreal Engine 4 template to help me out in creating the characters. I have also created a website to help me out in coming up with ideas for the game. Feel free to leave any suggestions for the characters, or just leave a comment and let me know what you think. I'd like to have the game out by Christmas, so any input is appreciated. Insulated boxes are well known. They are primarily used for protection of a living space. The living space typically takes the form of a home or a business establishment. The boxes may also be used as cold storage containers. Many insulated boxes are made from corrugated material.
