A new approach to the treatment of inflammatory bowel disease. Inflammatory bowel disease encompasses a range of entities, including Crohn's disease and ulcerative colitis. Crohn's disease is characterised by transmural granulomas that develop in the gastrointestinal tract, most commonly in the terminal ileum and colon. However, the pathogenesis of this condition is complex, and is thought to involve a complex interplay between innate immune responses and a dysregulated T-cell immune response. Crohn's disease is generally considered a granulomatous disorder
