A 63-year-old woman with recurrent bilateral interstitial pneumonia was initially treated with open lung biopsy; however, interstitial pneumonia recurred in the same area. When the patient was hospitalized, she was readmitted because of severe dyspnea and developed high fever. Because of the failure of conservative therapy, a bilateral posterolateral thoracotomy was performed. At that time, wedge resection of the right upper lobe showed noncaseating granuloma. Open lung biopsy and bronchoalveolar lavage of the left lung showed that the airway was narrowed by mucus plugging and mild eosinophilic infiltration. On the basis of these findings, the patient was treated with bilateral thoracoscopic decortication under general anesthesia. After surgery, her symptoms and laboratory findings were completely improved. The patient has been free of all symptoms except for a few minor degrees of dyspnea on exertion and a decrease in exercise capacity. In conclusion, bilateral thoracoscopic decortication may be effective in the treatment of a recurrent interstitial pneumonia with bronchial asthma, which fails to respond to steroid therapy.Q: Get data from google sheet and display it in google script I am trying to get data from a google sheet and then display it in an html document.
