the inhibition of Nrf2, an oxidative stress response transcription factor, by FBP2 has been identified to affect tumor cell proliferation and metastasis.[@b18-ijo-52-06-2598] FBP2 is a highly expressed in A549 lung cancer cells, and its expression is downregulated in moderately and poorly differentiated cancer cells compared to the well-differentiated cells, indicating that FBP2 functions in lung cancer progression. In addition, overexpression of FBP2 in A549 cells inhibited proliferation, colony formation, migration and invasion. Conversely, FBP2 knockdown in H1299 cells promoted tumor cell proliferation, colony formation, migration and invasion. Based on these data, our results indicate that the overexpression of FBP2 in lung cancer cells results in increased oxidative stress and enhances Nrf2 activity, thus affecting the cell proliferation and metastasis of lung cancer. In addition, high FBP2 expression also enhanced tumor growth in vivo. In summary, to our knowledge, this is the first study to investigate the role of FBP2 in lung cancer and its regulatory mechanisms. Our data demonstrates that FBP2 is a valuable tumor marker in lung cancer. FBP2 promotes the growth of lung cancer by increasing the production of ROS and through the upregulation of Nrf2. Therefore, our findings contribute to the identification of a novel target to improve treatment efficacy for the management of lung cancer.
