A two-site enzyme-linked immunosorbent assay (ELISA) for human smooth muscle myosin (smM) was developed and characterized. The purified human smM (FMC) was used as the primary antibody. SmM-specific polyclonal antibodies were prepared in rabbits with purified smM as the antigen. The assay is specific for human smM, with minimal cross-reactivity with other muscle proteins. It has low sensitivity for human serum, with a working concentration of approximately 0.2 ng ml⁻¹ of human serum (10% serum). The assay could be reproduced with anti-smM polyclonal antibodies in various sources, with the exception of a single batch of the preparation from a single source. It could be reproduced for several months without loss of antibody activity. SmM-specific antibodies were also detected by indirect immunofluorescent microscopy, which confirmed their specificity in the ELISA.
