WASHINGTON (Reuters) - U.S. President Donald Trump has sent a clear message to Beijing that he is willing to stand up to China, including through tariffs, trade actions and cyberattacks, as he seeks to negotiate a trade deal with the country. FILE PHOTO: A U.S. Soyuz TMA-15M rocket launches carrying the SpaceX CRS-19 mission with the Bangladesh-Mars-500 experiment as a secondary payload, from Kennedy Space Center in Cape Canaveral, Florida, U.S., December 20, 2019.
REUTERS/Joe Skipper "They're going to have to change their whole approach if they want to do it because they can't do it as they did before," Trump told Reuters in an interview. Trump, who imposed tariffs on Chinese products and launched a cyberwarfare campaign against Chinese companies, has said he wants to resolve the trade dispute with Beijing through talks, and believes a trade deal can be reached. "We have a very good chance to do something," he told Reuters. "We're talking about we may do something this year or we may do something next year, but we're going to do something." The interview, the first published by U.S. media since Trump and Chinese President Xi Jinping met on the sidelines of a G20 summit in Argentina in November, reflects the position of the U.S. president in a conflict with China that has become increasingly personal. Trump has refused to grant a full-blown interview to the Chinese since taking office in 2017, and Xi has snubbed Trump at nearly every international gathering since then. Trump has treated the conflict with China as a personal vendetta, and has refused to acknowledge any win. "I don't want to play nice," he said, reiterating a theme of his 2016 presidential campaign, saying he wants to make Beijing "play by the rules" or "they're not going to make it with us." Trump has announced tariffs on Chinese steel and aluminum, and a 25% tariff on an additional $250 billion worth of Chinese goods. He

KeyMacro is a highly-efficient program that helps you reduce the amount of time you have to spend on working with keyboards and other input devices. KeyMacro works with the Universal Windows Platform, so you can benefit from it on computers running Windows 10, 8, 7, or Windows Server 2012. With KeyMacro, you can quickly and efficiently create macros. You can use a keyboard shortcut, such as CTRL-T, to set the macro to a single key, or you can use a combination of keystrokes or a mouse click to set up a complex, multi-step macro. Having created the macro, you can then use KeyMacro to run it with a single click, on demand. You can run a single macro, or you can run a series of macro commands, that you create, or that you modify, in succession. KeyMacro can also be used as a command line program, so you can, for example, create a macro to display text, or to erase the contents of a folder. It can also be used as a simple text editor, by which you can edit the contents of any file. Details Hard Disk No Stop is a lightweight and effective piece of software whose main purpose resides in helping you keep your external hard drive active, when connected to a USB port, in order to stop it from powering down. Decompress the archive on your HDD Subsequent to downloading the archive, you can unzip it to any location you prefer on your external HDD, then launch the executable. By default, Hard Disk No Stop runs minimized in the notification area, but you can access its main window, a small, non-resizable screen, from the context menu, where you can customize its functioning parameters. Keep your HDD active by generating a simple log file The application functions by creating a log file in TXT format in the same folder where you run it from, thus giving the impression that the hard disk is constantly active. The log only contains a date and time stamp, but it manages to keep your HDD from powering down. The writing intervals are customizable to a certain point, as you can select between three available intervals, specifically '30 Sec', '1 Min' and '2 Min'. Optionally, Hard Disk No Stop can start minimized in the notification area. From the system tray menu, you can either restore its main window or exit the program. By keeping your external hard drive constantly active, the utility ensures it no longer powers down, then up again, whenever you need to work with it. This can improve its life duration, so you can benefit from it for a longer period of time, rather than have it run into problems sooner than expected. A handy means of preventing your external drive from powering down To conclude, Hard Disk No Stop is a practical and intuitive application that can assist you in ensuring your external HDD is constantly active, when connected to a USB port on your computer, thus preventing it from powering down due to lack of usage.Adult

K-Lite Codec Pack is the smallest, fastest and easiest way to add premium video and audio support to your PC. The program consists of the most demanded codecs and 3D-acceleration accelerators (the latter being an essential add-on for YouTube videos, for instance) and comes with a dedicated application that enhances playback speed with optimized, direct acceleration. Defrag My Drive lets you find out what is happening on your external drive from a software level, and provide you with detailed information about the defragmentation process. As it analyzes the data being transferred from one drive to another, it becomes able to understand the chunks of data being exchanged, their size, and the exact time in the past when they were initially loaded. The application also determines the file's impact on the available free space, and whether the data are being accessed or not. This universal CD/DVD writing software is able to create data-recordable, data-erasable and rewritable media from CD and DVD. It contains a wide array of features, including the ability to: erase/write existing data; create multiple CD and DVD titles in a single project; format and rewrite data on a disc; burn data-only and data/audio CDs/DVDs; and more. The program's ease of use and its compatibility with various types of media, along with its feature set, allows it to be used as a multimedia asset management solution, as well as an easy-to-use CD/DVD authoring software. The program integrates with your PC in order to provide you with a customizable navigation platform that shows the documents and folders you're currently accessing, the ones you have been working with recently, and the ones you're most likely to need in the future. The software is also a content organizer, as it enables you to: create and organize folders; create groups of related documents, programs, videos and more; and share items with others through e-mail, file sharing, and network access. It also offers you the option to create Web pages and documents that are linked to and can be accessed from a browser. BitLocker Drive Encryption is the world's first software encryption tool that you can use in conjunction with the BitLocker Drive Encryption feature of Microsoft Windows. This new software component works hand-in-hand with your operating system in order to provide you with the greatest amount of protection possible. If you are a security-conscious user, BitLocker Drive Encryption is an indispensable tool that can protect your personal files by encrypting them and leaving them accessible only to you, while also preventing unauthorized access or theft. The program not only acts as a replacement to the old security programs such as Windows SteadyState, but also improves upon them in a number of ways. It allows you to take a snapshot of the currently existing security configuration, if required, and allows you to edit the settings
