What's New in the?

There is one thing that stops CEOs and founders from sleeping at night, and it's not success, health, or finances. It's the pressure from the people you work with, and the people you're responsible to. You want to deliver the best, to make everyone look good. And since you're the one in charge, you're responsible for that. You're the one who gets the credit for an outstanding product or service. You get the salary and the recognition. But if you're like most people, all those things are only a small part of what you do. For most of us, it's much more complicated than that.

Q: Execute a wcf client method from command line I'm trying to call a WCF service method from the command line, but I'm having a hard time. I've successfully used the WCF client to call a web api method from the command line like this: `curl "" -i -X POST` But now I want to call a WCF method from the command line (I know the service is there because it's called by the web api). I've tried this: `wcfClient.functionName();` But when I run it, I get a `NullReferenceException`. My WCF service has this: `[ServiceBehavior(InstanceContextMode=InstanceContextMode.Single)]` public class ProbeService : IProbeService { public bool functionName() { } } Which means that I want to call the method (on a different instance) from the same class. The instance is set with a local variable like this: public void functionName() { var proxy = new ServiceReference1.ProbeClient(); proxy.functionName(); } I'm using Mono for Mac, so when I run the command I get this error:

---

cannot create instance of abstract

class or interface I want to call the method from the command line and to return a value (True or false), so I'm using the boolean return type. I'm not really sure how to fix this problem since I'm new to WCF and have read about CustomBindingType, but I'm guessing
