I just received a set of Hologic Discovery w/Sagittal profile. I am a bit hesitant on using this instrument since we are a high volume and busy clinic, but I am not seeing great results and are afraid that there might be an issue with material compression from the sagittal profile. The first series seems to have transferred quite well but the follow up does not seem as sharp/translucent and the plastic is more brittle. I noticed this in the follow up after the first series and I tried a few times to remachine them but without success. I am more concerned about the shorter build surface and fractured plastic from the 2nd set. Unfortunately, I am not seeing a lot of visualization between the first and second series. I am concerned that the profile may be causing plastic deformation from increased stress on the plastic. Anybody had experience with the Discovery? How did you get on with it? Did you try the Procesor instead? Lots of people like it but I have not used it myself. The material for the Sag 3da54e8ca3
