The strange case of film rights at MGM is not over. According to Variety, the studio has struck a deal with Gary Ross to direct a remake of the 1954 sci-fi classic "The Thing" as their next action-adventure. For those unfamiliar, the original film was the first of a trilogy in which a group of American soldiers get stranded in an Antarctic base where a deadly alien creature is discovered. Despite winning a special Edgar Award as the year's best feature at the 2nd BAFTA Awards, the original has gone largely unadapted for a remake ever since. Ross is the second director to be locked into the project, following a director who was hired last year and then fired for undisclosed reasons. The studio is planning to cast the movie with an unnamed actor who previously appeared in "The Hunger Games" and "Apollo 18." The original was directed by John Sturges, an icon of the genre. The original film was originally shot in Cinemascope, but the studio has now decided to convert the film into a 70mm presentation. Sturges has already met with the studio to discuss this and other projects. However, the studio claims he is opposed to a remaking of his work. MGM is also in the process of re-editing the original for a more modern audience, stripping out some of the story in order to make the original more suitable for modern audiences. The studio claims this is an "enrichment process." In the past, the studio has been rumored to be working on a remake of the 1948 western "Red River" and perhaps will remake "The Tarnished Prince," which they originally released as another Ed Wood project

What's New in the Adobe Photoshop 2021 (Version 22.4.2)?

Growing uncertainty and the threat of war will continue in 2019 for all of us, a pastor in Papua New Guinea says. "We've been reading about it in the media recently and it's making people nervous," Reverend Donald Sibier from Mission Christ Church in Port Moresby says. The world in 2019 may be a very different place from the one we know now. "What's happening around the world: we see troubles, we see the conflicts, we see people being afraid and they are anxious for their own safety, they are fearful about the future. "And there's a lot of people in our congregations who say that they feel exactly the same way and the reason is that they believe that these events are related to the peace of the world. "And of course they are." Pastor Sibier says many of the events of 2016 and 2017 might have been different if it were not for the important role played by New Zealand. But he says the events of last year might have changed the course of history. "I think that we are in a very uncertain time now and we see trouble always coming, always coming. "So we have to always wait to see what the future holds, but at this time we should be very aware that trouble is coming our way. "So, we're very grateful to those who have acted in a very significant role in 2017 and 2016 and we pray for these very important things as we go forward. "We are very grateful for what New Zealand has done and we hope that this country will continue to be a safe, a good place for all to live." Pastor Sibier says the church goes through the years in cycles of faith, suffering and renewal. "So, we are ready to renew ourselves for the next cycle. "The world is changing, it's becoming very uncertain, and so we are, ourselves, called to be aware, to be obedient, to trust in our God. "We are called to be obedient to the ways of God, we are called to live lives consistent with our faith, even though it's a very uncertain time."
