Choose wisely. Most of the time, just search: Q: How to print every byte of Data in a binary file using Delphi I have a binary file of 100kb, and I want to print the first byte on each row. I have a function which opens the file, and I need to print every byte on a line, like this: procedure printFileToScreen(fName: string); begin x := File.Open(fName); while true do begin x.Print(Byte, 1); Application.ProcessMessages; break; end end; But this doesn't work, it prints a single line. Can anyone help me? A: When you say "every byte" are you referring to every byte in the file or every byte on the screen? Have you tried putting a carriage return on the last line? You could also print the position in the file and stop after the last character. Or you could loop and print the nth character (where n is the position in the file). BTW, I don't think print will work the way you have it written. I think it will print a single character (based on the default printer) to the default output device. So it might work better something like this: procedure printFileToScreen(fName: string); var f: TFileStream; c: char; position: Integer; begin f := TFileStream.Create(fName, fmOpenRead or fmShareDenyWrite); try position := 0; while true do begin c := f.Read(Byte); if c #0 then
