If you've seen it, you've seen me. If you haven't seen it, well, let's just say that if I look like the other two women in it, I'm pretty much her doppelganger. The main subject of the show is Madeline Lane (Claire Danes), a wealthy widow whose husband (Chris Eigeman) dies in a car accident just as her ten-year-old daughter goes off to boarding school. Since then, Madeline has been living alone in the apartment her husband had arranged for her on Park Avenue, with her daughter and a housekeeper. And, well, the show is something like Sex and the City, except it's about a woman living alone in a single apartment and a woman living alone in a single apartment who's a writer for a magazine. I can't seem to get enough of it! The main narrative of Park Avenue is about Madeline, her daughter, and her housekeeper trying to move on, to "get back on their feet," to say, "we're not a couple anymore," to "get back in the saddle," to "get back out
