Carbon Dioxide (CO₂) Diving Systems The carbon dioxide diving systems made by the Department of Hyperbaric Medicine at the University of Michigan are designed to safely achieve hyperbaric exposure and to monitor CO₂ status during the exposure. The department has designed and built a variety of carbon dioxide (CO₂) diving systems, some of which are available for clinical use and others as experimental models. Most of the systems are designed to deliver continuous (end-tidal) or intermittent (mouthpiece) breathing gases and to provide appropriate decompression when going from a hyperbaric chamber to a lower pressure ambient environment (decompression). A variety of compressor and gas manifold configurations are available and are used to deliver gas to the dived patient. There are many types of CO₂ diving systems made by the department including: One CO₂-air diving system with a fixed nitrogen concentration. The breathing gas manifold includes the ventilator, compressor and a variable-frequency
