In addition to all default Excel settings, users have the option to make any necessary formatting adjustments before exporting the file to CSV. While the application can be used to convert any type of spreadsheet, you can also adapt the formatting options to suit specific needs by choosing which columns to export to CSV. If you have a need to distribute data to other systems, Yarux Excel to CSV can either export a single cell or a complete column to CSV. Setting the file type in the Excel export dialog box is not an option in Yarux Excel to CSV; however, you can force a specific type of file by appending "-xls" to the end of a filename. For example, if you want to save a spreadsheet as a CSV file, you would type "test.xls-xls". When you are ready to convert the Excel file to CSV, simply choose the desired destination for the file from the application's location list. Yarux Excel to CSV will prompt you to save the file, select a filename, and click "Convert." You can then apply the desired settings for the output file or leave them as-is. Q: django and rendering json in view So my view looks like #I am using this view for search function

def searchView(request):
    #pulling in data to fill my View
    #model=MainModel for record in MainModel.objects.all():
    record.FullName = record.FullName + ", " + record.FirstName + " " + record.LastName print(request.GET) print(record)
    #returning a view that will render json
    return render(request, "search.html", {'record':record, 'recordNum':MainModel.objects.all().count()})

and the output of print(request.GET) looks like [{"fullName": 'First Name', 'id': 1, 'fullName': 'Last Name'}, {'fullName': 'Last Name'}] which is correct. I tried to access the json {'fullName': 'First Name', 'id': 1, 'fullName': 'Last Name'}, {'fullName': 'Last Name'} in this way:

return render(request, "search.html", {'record':record, 'recordNum':MainModel.objects.all().count()})

but was getting this error

Internal Server Error: /app/Main_Display/
