Thirty-nine patients with coronary artery disease were treated by intracoronary stent implantation in the course of one hospitalization in the period June 1989-March 1990. In the majority of cases (35 of 39) coronary stent implantation was successful. Focal restenosis could be found in 8 of 38 patients. Angina pectoris was improved in 35 of 38 patients. The importance of lesion preparation with balloon dilatation is stressed. Unsuccessful cases could be improved by an additional occlusion balloon. In an attempt to elucidate further the pharmacology of the opiate-mediated inhibition of the spontaneous contractile activity of rat vas deferens in vitro, the effects of naloxone, nalorphine, cyclosporin and corticosterone on the inhibitory response to morphine were investigated.
