A comprehensive firewall software is intended to protect your PC from viruses and hackers. Windows Firewall controls traffic through network interfaces in order to manage connection types. The software helps the user to manage the configurations of the network interfaces, subnet masks, and the use of network protocols. In addition, you can set the firewall settings according to your current network needs and preferences. The Windows Firewall can be used to protect your PC from virus attacks and hackers. It is also possible to enable the access to specific Internet connections or websites. This kind of functionality can be useful if you need to protect your privacy from other network users. A good feature of the firewall is the ability to add exceptions. You can also create profiles for a specific purpose. One of the main reasons for using this software is the ability to protect your computer from various threats. During the installation, you need to make sure that the firewall software supports the network interface cards. The functionality of this program relies on the computer configuration. Therefore, you should make sure that the required peripherals are connected to the computer. One of the main features of Windows Firewall is the ability to control and manage the network connections. The program allows you to manage your network settings such as the IP addresses, subnet masks, and the types of TCP/UDP connections. The firewall also includes a powerful device manager which lets you easily remove unwanted programs. A very important part of the firewall is the ability to create profiles. You can create profiles and store them as you like in order to protect the system from unexpected changes. In addition, it is also possible to assign specific profiles to the network devices. This will make it easier to manage the profile settings on a single PC. Windows Firewall includes a powerful scan tool which helps the users to scan the computer for problems. Additionally, you can use the firewall to protect your privacy. You can add exceptions in order to allow or disable certain applications and websites. This tool helps you to protect your PC against a security risk or malware. There are two ways in which you can configure the firewall settings. First, you can use the Windows Firewall properties. They are located on the System Control Panel. The user interface is very simple and straightforward, making it easier to adjust the settings. You can use the options to add exceptions, manage the network connection types, and disable specific programs. The second option to configure the firewall is the online settings. It is possible to access the online help system by clicking the Support icon located at
