Laparoscopic resection of large diaphragmatic hernia: report of a case. To report the first case of a laparoscopic repair of a giant diaphragmatic hernia in a patient with a body habitus suitable for the laparoscopic approach. A 33-year-old man with a history of gastric and cholecystectomy presented with abdominal pain, weight loss, and dyspnea on exertion. Computed tomography revealed a giant left-sided diaphragmatic hernia encompassing the stomach and small bowel with an interposed colon. The patient underwent a laparoscopic repair with placement of a hepatic and biliopancreatic stent. A 2 x 2 cm defect in the posterolateral diaphragm was repaired using a polypropylene mesh. The procedure was completed successfully without significant bleeding or other complications. The patient was doing well at the 24-month follow-up. Laparoscopic management of giant diaphragmatic hernias is feasible in selected patients. You are here Singles v. Married Population is growing dramatically in Jamaica. These kids are grown and have families of their own and are becoming parents themselves. But will these committed relationships survive the test of time? On one side of the society is the marital bond. The other is the world of the single. Divorce rates, for example, are higher in the world of singlehood. To really understand why, there has to be a context. I can't speak for all women but I feel that married women have more societal expectations to meet, whether they be in the home, at work or in church. The "need to perform" is one of the reasons so many married women end up in divorce. Even though they believe they have little choice but to stay married, all their efforts to live as spouses are usually struck down by social expectations, family obligations and economic strain. Meanwhile, it is the world of singlehood that can draw on a much larger pool of socially acceptable mates. No wonder young people flocked to the singles bars of our past. Being single now has a much broader meaning, not simply a single moment in time but the lifestyle the entire rest of your life. In this rapidly changing world of singles, I can identify only a few solid reasons for staying in this lifestyle. The first and most obvious is passion. Very often, when couples come together they recognise that they have been

Q: Global variabe not storing I am experiencing an issue with my application where a global variable is not storing/retrieving. I have decided to apply the recommended solution in the other stackoverflow questions asking similar questions. The problem is I am not entirely sure what i am doing wrong in my code, I am new to JavaScript. I cannot see where I am doing anything wrong or getting the wrong idea about how a global variable works. My console.log(groups) displays an empty array, so at the very least it is going into the loop. My HTML: The JavaScript: (function () { var groups = []; var groups_list = []; var games_list = []; var i = 1; setInterval(function () { for (i = 1; i <= 10; i++) { game = { title: 'Space Digger', image: 'images/game_' + i + '.png', text: 'Space Digger' }; game.appendTo('.game'); $('').addClass('game_h2').text(game.attr('title')); game.appendTo('.games'); groups.push(game); game = $('').addClass('game_image').attr('src', 'images/game_' + i + '.png'); game.appendTo('.game'); game = $('').addClass('game_text').text('Space Digger'); game.appendTo('.game_text'); game = $('').addClass('game_text').text('Vlambeer'); game.appendTo('.game_text'); game = $('').addClass('game_text').text('Starbreeze'); game.appendTo('.game_text'); groups_list.push(game); console.log(groups); //logs an empty array } }, 3000); })(); Any help would be greatly appreciated
