Hormonal dynamics in first trimester human pregnancy. Hormonal profiles have been established for oestradiol-17 beta, progesterone, and human chorionic gonadotrophin (hCG) in serum from first trimester normal pregnancy, and also for luteinizing hormone (LH) and prolactin (PRL) in serum from the second trimester. The lowest serum concentrations of oestradiol-17 beta were found during the first half of the second trimester, and after the 30th wk, high concentrations were observed. No difference was found in serum progesterone concentrations in the first trimester between high and low risk pregnancies, but high risk pregnancies had higher levels in the second trimester. Serum hCG concentrations of the first trimester appear to be less than the last half of the second trimester, and are dependent on the stage of gestation. LH concentrations are low during the first half of the second trimester, and concentrations of PRL show no change during pregnancy.

Q: Check for comma in string I am saving a string in mongodb, but in some cases, I want to split that string into multiple rows. In the case, I have the exact same string "1,2,3,4,5" that has 5 numbers. I want to store it into 5 rows in mongodb. I got a mapping which stores a string into an array of strings, like this: {"test": ["1", "2", "3", "4", "5"]} I am trying to check if there is an empty space between the string: case when string like '% ' || " then This will return true if there is an empty space after the comma, but not just a comma by itself. This would only check for spaces after the comma, so "1,2,3,4,5," should return true, but "1,2,3,4,5,a" should return false. Any ideas on how I could handle this? Any help is appreciated!

A: Here's a quick demo, where I use the distinct flag to get only 1 row for each "group" of 1,2,3,4,5 { "test": [{
