In a little-noticed part of the Dodd-Frank Wall Street Reform and Consumer Protection Act, Section 157, the bill created a new regulatory agency, the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau, which is "to be headed by a director, removable only for cause," with the authority to carry out broad and sweeping new authority. The Supreme Court has made it clear that a company cannot be denied the opportunity to compete in the market unless there is a "substantial" anti-competitive effect or motive. But in a two-page analysis in the Michigan Law Review, Jeffrey L. Harrison, a University of Michigan law professor, argues that there is a "broad new duty for the government to protect consumers" if there is a substantial likelihood that a merger would reduce competition in any market. Your bones will soon be as brittle as the aging bones of your mother. New research from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, Dartmouth College and Ohio State University finds that the bones of young women aged 30 and younger are significantly weaker than those of women aged 35 or older. The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals, in an 8-to-1 decision, concluded that a school system cannot fire a teacher for criticizing the school board during a public meeting. During that meeting, a police officer had shot a student. The police officer had immunity, but the district fired the teacher. The teacher argued that his criticism was protected speech. When the government is supposed to assess whether a proposed merger is anti-competitive, it must be looking at the competitive situation as a whole, not just the market in which the business is operating. And the government must be looking at the situation in the long term. Linda Hensley
