Postal 2 - A Week in Paradise [AWP] of 500 Weapons.by Draven-Download.comPrion disease in domestic mammals: a review. Since the identification of the bovine spongiform encephalopathy (BSE) agent, the prion diseases of farm animals have been increasingly recognized. The sporadic, transmissible and novel BSE prion diseases are frequently enzootic, involving many species, and are responsible for massive prion disease epidemics. In addition to the farm animals described in this review, other susceptible mammals are now documented as prion-affected, including mink, lions, badgers, guinea pigs and raccoons. Numerous studies indicate that the susceptibility of some farm animal species is not a reflection of the susceptibility of the natural reservoir, the carnivore host. Genetic and biochemical differences within the prion protein may enable the "convergence" of multiple prion hosts. Many species can support the replication of different BSE agent strains. For example, a high virulent TSE agent (classical BSE) has been successfully transmitted to both sheep and cattle. Moreover, unlike the BSE agent, the biological and genetic factors of the rodentderived scrapie prion agent are poorly characterized. Furthermore, some TSEs in farm animals are not susceptible to certain BSE strains. This implies that BSE strains may be continuously emerging in the farm environment or that cell cultures in vitro have failed to maintain the in vivo characteristics of the natural BSE agent./ @jsx jsx */ import { EditorState } from'slate' import { jsx } from '../../../ test-utils /jsx' const input = (This is bold and italic.) const output = (This is bold and italic.) it('simplifiestext
