I have an XML file on my localhost which was working just fine on my previous PHP version. My current issue is that I have the error Call to undefined function get_cfg_var(). This function is part of the html dom library and I don't know why the function works fine on my old PHP version and it won't work on the new one. I found a proposed solution which looks interesting. Has anyone else seen this issue? A: Well after a bit of digging around I found out why this issue was occurring. The reason was that my PHP extensions directory was pointing to an old version and was not the right version for my system. I used the following command to check which version of PHP extensions I have installed: php -i | grep extension Here is a list of current extensions I installed: You can check which version you are running by using the php --version command. I also found a solution that I have chosen to use
