Tekla Structures is the most constructible structural software for BIM.Q: Why is computing the sum of the first n primes less efficient than computing the sum of the first n squares? The two sums, $1/2*S(1+2+...+n)$ and $S(1+2+...+n)$ where S is the sum of all natural numbers (n!= 1), differ by a factor of 2. I don't understand why the original sum $(1/2 * S(1+2+...+n))$ has to be doubled. A: For $n>1$, the sum $$S_n=\sum_{k=1}^n k $$ is not proportional to n or n^2, because the terms are not all increasing. If it were, then n^2 would be a constant factor larger than n in the leading part of the sum. You might be interested in There is also a Wikipedia article about squares and cubes: A more direct solution for S_n is to notice that $$S_n=\frac12\sum_{k=1}^{n-1}(n-k)$$ and $S_n>\frac12n(n-1)$. [Endoscopic ultrasonography in the diagnosis of gastrointestinal neoplasia]. Endoscopic ultrasonography is a diagnostic imaging technique which provides high-resolution images of the wall of hollow organs. The role of endoscopic ultrasonography (EUS) in assessing gastrointestinal (GI) neoplasia has been rapidly evolving. It has replaced computed tomography, and is now the most sensitive and specific imaging method in the detection of GI neoplasia. The introduction of endoscopic ultrasonography in the diagnostic work-up of GI neoplasms has changed the management of patients with GI neoplasms. It has reduced the need for surgery in case of distant metastasis and performed biopsies at regions difficult to approach with other imaging
