Socializer is a browser built on Facebook. It is a browser created to be used through Facebook to access all of the content that is available on Facebook. Learn more about Socializer Thursday, May 28, 2009 Microsoft's Windows Live may not have yet been a fully organized system, but the future's here and it has to say that it is all about Windows live mail. For those who have been using old-fashioned e-mail systems before, this new web-based version offers all of the characteristics you are already familiar with. The catch comes in the form of the fact that it's Web-based, but what it offers is quite impressive. The mail client is actually a free service that allows you to not only access email, but other features as well. Such as keeping your calendar up to date, talk about social networks. Actually, Facebook is one of the services that can be used through the service, being that it is an Internet site in itself. In fact, it offers all of the features you can find on Facebook. Social Networking and Newsgroups Social networking is a part of Windows live mail since it is developed to take advantage of all of the information that can be found on other Internet sites. If you have been using a social network before and you have thousands of friends on your own profile, you can now access that information and be part of that community, by using the built-in software of Windows live mail. If you are part of a newsgroup before, you can directly access them from the mail client as well. This option will be available just under the social networking site where it allows you to access all of the communities that you are part of. Windows live mail also offers an RSS newsfeeds option as well. This is basically a way to access the news that has been published through a website or a blog, just like you do for email. You can also use it to receive tweets (Twitter), which can be done through a search from the client. Exchange Support In case you have been using an email service on your own, you can import your address book from that to your new mail client. The same goes for the exchange options, and you will have to send that to Microsoft to be used through the service. Windows live mail is much more than a free e-mail service, it comes with some features that will make you want to use it. The fact that it's a web-based mail client makes it a lot easier
