A Note from Niecy: I am so excited about this issue of "All Girl" because there are so many different types of women that we need to be celebrating right now, in this moment. We're coming from all different social, political, racial, economic and religious backgrounds and yet, we're all just women! This issue is so diverse. You'll read about the multiple sides of the #MeToo movement that I think you'll agree with, including the positives, what the future could hold for the movement, the new standards for newsrooms, the ways women of color are pursuing careers that they feel is their best chance for success (and the very interesting concept of "the brown girl's pay raise"), and even an inside look at the Washington Redskins' loss of name. Because there is a lot of information that I feel is important at this moment in time and the reasons are all woman! Highlights: When I became an attorney at the age of 21 (which many of you probably know is legal drinking age for women..... and now I'm 26), I felt trapped. I knew that I wanted to be an attorney and I'd worked hard for it and I'd be damned if I wasn't going to make it. I wasn't going to be the second in line of my family who never made it out of the ghetto. I wanted more for myself and the positions I'd be able to achieve. It wasn't until I read articles and books and saw a video about the 4 stages of grief that I'd be able to see that my struggle with law school at the age of 21 was more about not being willing to face that challenge. It was more about my unwillingness to change myself in order to gain acceptance into

Career Harmon attended the Tucson School of the Arts where she joined a band called "Blue Velvet Band" with Randy Weitzel and Carrie Hammond. This band made a series of singles for MCA Records from 1987 to 1988. This included the top 20 hit "Crazy", which was a duet with musician Geoff Moore. This was followed by the smash chart hit "When I Get Over You" in 1988. This single was recorded by another artist but gained Harmon's first major fame. This success followed Harmon when she joined the music group "Navarone", which released a few singles in 1989. Harmon sang vocals on the hit song "Foolish Heart" by Michael Bolton. In 1990, she wrote with Tony Battaglia and Toni Braxton the Grammy winning song "Another Sad Love Song". The song she wrote with Michael McDonald, "Say Goodbye" became a number 1 hit for him in both the US and the UK. The song was covered by artists such as Joe Jackson, Huey Lewis and the News, Diana Ross, Bruce Hornsby, Whitney Houston, and
