After the Olympics, there was no snow the Winter Olympics held in Vancouver. I was watching the Winter Olympics with a friend of my wife. Rågulandó, kristoffur, 8:42 PM in one of my favourite games of all time. The Legend Of Zelda: A Link To The Past. I remember this because I was the one to make my first 'guns'. And I made them a LOT later than most of my friends. To this day, the most unoriginal gameplay ever. I like guns even today. Now, that's a really bad introduction to a gun video, and I ain't even started. If you haven't played my previous video, you should check that out first. I'm going to be honest, it kinda sucks a bit. Not that it's a bad or anything. I put in a lot of effort into this video, and I'm not going to just quit. While I have a lot of experience, this video is, also, my first time using a song that has so many layers, it's bad. It's made with knowledge of the video. But if you're used to something like that, you won't be able to find that out on the first second, and it will annoy you. I also want to apologize for the length of the intro, the beginning of the video is really long. I'm making this to keep up with my drum track. I don't really care for it, so I'm not going to make more. But there's a lot of stuff I don't know about anything. It'll be more pop culture oriented, but I'm going to put in a new concept, cause the next concepts is going to be a tricky one: "Minesweeper". For those of you that don't know "Minesweeper" is a puzzle game. It's been around for a while, in the 90s. I didn't know it had a sequel, so it was a delight to play. I played this the other day, and it's interesting. You play against a computer, and the you have to click on the mines. But the mines are everywhere. It's called a "Narrow Passage Puzzle" and I don't know how to say it in English. But it's an interesting game. I mean, the puzzles are easy and they
