The present invention also relates to an air conditioning system which utilizes compressor driven fan means in conjunction with a heater to drive conditioned air over a plurality of air outlets. In dual mode air conditioning systems, a first zone is heated, while the other zone(s) remain or are only partially cooled. When the first zone is cooled, the air conditioned from the second zone is restricted. In such air conditioning systems, various types of air distribution systems have been used to distribute the air conditioned to various locations within a passenger compartment. For example, the air flow in the passenger compartment may be supplied through an upper zone by use of an upper vent positioned between the uppermost portions of the air conditioning system and the passenger compartment. In another example, one or more further vents may be positioned within the passenger compartment to cool the air more efficiently. One example is an upper vent and a lower vent which direct air to the upper portion of the passenger compartment. Thus, the second zone of the passenger compartment is cooled less by the air from the first zone of the passenger compartment. However, since the air from the second zone is mixed with the air from the first zone in the upper portion of the passenger compartment, this configuration may

However, its use for upper airway obstruction and for facilitating secretion clearance from the pharynx in children with cleft palate has not previously been reported. AQUACLEX® is a polyacrylic-based topical agent with a pH of less than 5.5 \[[@CR12]\]. Its use in settings of frequent or large pharyngeal spillage has previously been reported \[[@CR32]\] but its use for successful results in the current study was possibly due to the selected pH used and the soft consistency of the agent. Despite the use of multiple pharmacologic agents, our results are not statistically significant. There is a possibility of selection bias in the group of children selected for surgical management. We also did not assess the use of snoring aids during sleep. The prevalence of associated anomalies was higher in the surgical group than in the conservatively managed group. The main associated defect in the study group was oral clefts. Cleft lip and palate usually require a multidisciplinary management approach. Conclusion {#Sec5} ===== In children with a history of OAS, an association with cleft lip/palate requires a multidisciplinary approach for cleft-related airway assessment. Surgical management is the most successful treatment strategy for airway obstruction in children with OAS. **Competing interests** The authors declare that they have no competing interests. **Authors' contributions** BAA was the principal investigator, and participated in the design of the study, acquisition of data, analysis of data and manuscript preparation. The pace of life is so much faster than the calm of the country. While I had fun playing in the snow in Chicago, I was bored to death with no activity. Since this is a retirement home, I am okay with a slower pace. These residents are also willing to appreciate the gift of life as well as help in their living room so that I can have a comfortable home-away-from-home. They have a wide array of activities going on in the home and they all take part in the fun. My job is to set up baskets with snacks and drinks for the residents to enjoy during my on-call times. I also prepare a fresh fruit tray daily from the community garden which is used as a reward for doing their jobs. While they don't "pay" me, I consider it to be a form of pay so that I can motivate them to do their jobs efficiently. There are many activities that take place in the home. I have some residents who use their board games like chess, checkers, and poker. Other residents play cards and the games are free. There are dining table games like the card game War. These residents are mostly deaf so our interpreter is present to assist with directions and responses. The residents also play dominoes and there are chess sets in the dining room. I also have an electric guitar that I play for the older residents, most of whom have good hearing. They can recognize the notes of the guitar. It is a good thing to have music in a home because it helps them sleep and relax. The residents of this home take an active role in organizing their house and doing the chores that need to be done. Since I am not living here full-time, I am told to leave the house
