Using Fireworks to make a logo Fireworks is a superquick and easy program for creating logos. It enables you to make a logo in seconds rather than having to draw one pixel by pixel, as you can in other graphics programs. It makes it easy to produce simple logos that are clean and use appropriate colors. However, Fireworks doesn't let you do much editing of the finished logo. This is where Photoshop shines. Fireworks Logo Maker has a similar tool and with some practice you can produce reasonably good logos in minutes. Most versions of Fireworks come with a free Fireworks Logo Maker program. The $19 version of Fireworks has improved the logo-making process, but if you're just making a logo, you can find plenty of tutorials on the Internet to show you how to make a logo in Fireworks without having to purchase an upgrade. Fireworks is often used for logos, branding, and posters, but it has many other features that can make your work more productive and polished than in Photoshop.

Cell cycle-dependent phosphorylation of the gamma-aminobutyric acid type B receptor subunit-associated protein. Recently, a protein co-precipitated with the gamma-aminobutyric acid type B receptor (GABA(B)) from neuronal cell lines with low (G418) and high (neuroblastoma) expression of GABA(B) receptors has been described [Gu et al. (1994) Cell 76, 477-489]. This novel protein, named GABA(B) receptor associated protein (GABARAP), was characterized as a neuroendocrine marker, its mRNA expression being developmentally regulated. It is a member of a novel protein family which includes GABARAP, a phosphoprotein and an integral transmembrane protein of the endosomal system. Here we show that the GABARAP protein is phosphorylated in a cell cycle-dependent manner. Furthermore, GABARAP is associated with the GABA(B) receptor in vivo, and we provide evidence that the function of the GABARAP protein is linked to the GABA(B) receptor.

1. Field of the Invention The present invention relates to a method of manufacturing a semiconductor device having a circuit composed of a thin film transistor (hereinafter referred to as a TFT) formed on a substrate, and more particularly to a method of manufacturing a semiconductor device having a TFT of which the semiconductor region is formed over an insulating surface.

2. Description of the Related Art In recent years, a technique for forming a thin film transistor (TFT) by using a semiconductor thin film (with a thickness of about several to several hundreds nm) formed over a substrate having an insulating surface has attracted attention. The thin film transistor has been widely applied to electronic devices such as ICs or electro-optical devices, and has been developed particularly as a switching element for display devices. Liquid crystal display devices, which are one of the most typical examples of image display devices, have been rapidly developed as image display devices for note-type personal computers or personal digital assistants, because they have characteristics such as lightweight, low power consumption, and superior structural design. The market for liquid crystal display devices is expanding rapidly. For example, liquid crystal television sets, which are generally used as display devices for large-scale public information communication means, are spreading rapidly, and their demand is increasing. In order to realize low power consumption and high

Cu(I)-catalyzed B(3,5)-arylation of arenes with N-aryl-2-nitroaldimines and pyridinium salts. A B(3,5)-arylation protocol for the synthesis of 1,2,3,5-tetrasubstituted arenes from readily available arenes and aryl halides was developed. The reaction proceeded via a Cu(I)-catalyzed arylation of the 2-nitroaldimine with aryl halides in the presence of an aryl pyridinium salt. I came across a DeviantArt forum for a series of illustrations done by a group of French illustrators called "Les Princes des Eaux". I love a lot of the illustrations, but I have to admit that I was really impressed by a particular drawing by J. R. Schaal which you can see in this DeviantArt gallery. I personally have never heard of J.R. Schaal but, when I looked him up, I learned a lot about him and his career. He is a French illustrator that has won a number of awards and was a guest at a number of festivals in his country. It seems that there have been quite a number of exhibitions of his work throughout Europe and that he is a real fan of surrealism. The style of his art is very precise, detailed and distinctive. I would describe it as realistic but, the elements that you would normally consider to be part of realistic art aren't always so easy to see. When I first saw his work I was a little confused about what I was seeing. The images were very clearly drawn but, most often there was no reference to the real world. I thought for sure that it was all done in the mind of the artist. Finally, I put my confused mind to rest and realized that it was totally possible that he was creating all of the elements he was using even though they may not be recognizable to me. Some of the images look like they were painted onto old walls. That's because much of J. R. Schaal's work was inspired by a love of the unique colors and textures of old buildings and streets. I really love that detail. It makes it that much more enjoyable to look at his work. I love the way that he goes all out and creates a surreal story within his scenes. The imagination that he puts into his work is really amazing
