The invention is based on a priority application DE 102 13 153 9 which is hereby incorporated by reference. The present invention relates to a method for executing an up-link or a down-link of a communications connection in a communications network. In the text that follows, when there is a need to refer to a component, to a component which is connected to the network or to an element of the system, this will be achieved by the word "computer" with an upper index i. The i-th computer of the network is called hereinafter the network-side computer. In the same way, in the text that follows, when there is a need to refer to a communications connection, this will be achieved by the word "communication" with an upper index k. In the case of communications systems, this is generally a question of a communications connection between a first node computer (associated with the first node) and a second node computer (associated with the second node) and of the communications protocol by which this communication connection is set up. When the first node computer establishes a communications connection with the second node computer, the communications connection between the two node computers is in the form of a "down-link" (or "down-stream") or "up-link" (or "up-stream"). In the down-link, the communications protocol includes a sub-protocol for representing the information coming from the first node computer. This information is generally called "data packet" or "data frame". This data packet is then transmitted from the first node computer to the second node computer. In the down-link, the communications protocol further includes a sub-protocol for representing an identifier (message ID) on the first node computer side, by means of which the first node computer is able to recognize which information it is up-streaming. In the following description, this identifier will be called the "streaming flag". During a down-link, the communications protocol includes in particular a sub-protocol for representing information transmitted from the first node computer to the second node computer, i.e. it represents messages in the form of data packets. In the down-link, the communications protocol includes a second sub-protocol for representing the information transmitted by the second node computer to the first node computer, i.e. it represents messages in the form of data packets.
