The following steps assume you've already installed Photoshop, found an image to work on, and have opened a new document. If you haven't, that's okay; we've got you covered. If you're in Windows, press Ctrl+N to launch the File | New command, select Photoshop | Photoshop | PSD Document and follow the onscreen instructions. In macOS, open Photoshop and choose File | New (Command+N). If you're using Photoshop CC, choose File | New. In the following steps, we use the illustration shown in Figure 9-7 as an example. Photoshop offers many useful photo-editing features, and it's not always intuitive to use. Figure 9-8 shows the Photoshop Elements version of the sketch used in the following steps. 1. Select the Pen tool and click once to create a new anchor point. The point is automatically activated when you click. Click again to close the anchor point. Drag your cursor around to sketch in your drawing. Figure 9-7: Illustration used in the following steps. 2. Click the Selection tool and, using the Free Select tool (refer to Figure 9-8), select the whole area of the image that you want to edit. The selection is highlighted in green. You can control the size of the selection using the handles to resize and move the selection. You can't undo the selection, which is an important thing to know. 3. Press D on the keyboard to open the Move dialog box and select the Free Transform tool. The Move tool adjusts the shape of the selection. You can drag the edges in and out to shape the selection as needed. 4. Click to place the cursor where you want the transformation to begin and draw shapes with the Move tool. The image should appear to move relative to where you draw the shape. Figure 9-9 shows the result. Figure 9-8: The Photoshop Elements version of the same image used in the following steps. Figure 9-9: The sketch in Figure 9-7 has been transformed. 5. Press Shift+Z on the keyboard to deselect the drawing or press Esc to close the Move tool. 6. Adjust the perspective of the image by zooming in and out and panning around the image. 7. Click the arrow next to the Zoom tool or press + to zoom in. When

If you were using a parameterised query, then the values are returned by the procedure in a single column of type nvarchar(max). If you were using an explicit cursor, then the procedure returns the results in the resultset returned by the cursor. If you are using a more recent version of SQL Server (i.e. above SQL Server 2005), then the results returned by a cursor are also returned as nvarchar(max) If the results are being returned as nvarchar(max) then you should probably be using Convert.ToInt32 on the value returned.
