The Ethics Committee requested a report on the incident, which took place after the 2017 green-carpet premiere, in a resolution released in March 2018. "The Venice Film Festival and the Festival Opera have decided to jointly withdraw from the award ceremony the annual Golden Lion that they have been giving to the film 'Dogtooth'," it reads. "With this decision, they decide to give the Golden Lion in general to the other film 'The Square', by (Italian director) Luca Guadagnino." "The committee's investigation has provided evidence of a serious violation of the code of ethics of the festival and the Opera Verona by Mister [Luca] Guadagnino" — including "unbecoming, indecent, or obscene behavior, in breach of the ethical code that includes all aspects of the activities of the Festival and the Opera, since it is an artistic act, as well as a charitable deed that could adversely affect society as a whole." A festival spokesperson was not immediately available for comment when reached by Variety. Guadagnino, whose film also won the Red Director's award at the Venice Film Festival, left the awards ceremony a short time later and has
