FIFA 22 introduces "HyperMotion Technology," which uses motion capture data collected from 22 real-life players playing a complete, high-intensity football match in motion capture suits. The data collected from player movements, tackles, aerial duels and on-ball actions is used to power FIFA 22 gameplay. You can see a full breakdown of the new game engine in our earlier post. As we mentioned in that post, four new features will be introduced, all of which have been designed to enhance the experience of the gameplay: Motionbook is an added feature in FIFA Ultimate Team that lets you watch videos of real players who have played in a FIFA game and compare them with your player model. Just like on the gameplay section, you can also watch people in action in HyperMotion. Step into the shoes of real-world footballer, and immerse yourself in an authentic competition experience. No more random 'butt kicks', and you won't experience the same 'playback' hell that you experienced with previous games. New in-depth, in-game commentary is back, and this time the calls from the commentators are more detailed and show more information about the players on the pitch. In FIFA Ultimate Team you can now buy the FIFA Ultimate Team cards of the stars of your favourite football clubs, and take part in your own team formation. I'll have all these new features in-depth covered in the final part of this article on FIFA 22 this coming week, and at the time of going to print I will also have reviews of all the major new features and gameplay updates. This week, we're going to look at new career mode and the 'Create a Player' feature in the main game. New Career Mode FIFA 22 introduces the ability to create a player from scratch and alter his stats to be more suitable for your team. You can create a player by using the additional modes 'Create a Player' and 'Create a Team' within the main Career Mode. We do know the names of the types of players that you'll be able to create, as EA Sports has already announced the "Personal Trainer" and "General Enhancement" levels: The Personal Trainer is the new mode in Career Mode where you can create an individual player by saving and editing his stats, but you are unable to transfer him into
