G950: As an F-18 simulation, G950 requires a computer running. G-950 can't get anything from Garmin without the Garmin. For more on how to solve this on Mac. As well as the P-51D and. Wednesday, March 22, 2011 A hobby I have developed is collecting old maps of the area around my hometown and the country where I live. When looking at old maps, sometimes you can see a famous street that is no longer there, or a diner that is now gone. The reason for this is usually due to relocation. Having a few of these maps allows me to look back through time and see what was once there and is now gone. Google: A Personalised Welcome - gulbrandr A free web service that automatically detects an internet visitor's location and time of day, and presents them with a personalized welcome message. ===== michaelbuckbee I've always liked the theory of using time to present things based on what's appropriate at that moment in a user's life. As a parent I kind of think of it as a bit odd that someone would come looking at my kids' stuff on the internet - but at the same time if I was at the airport and my kids were in their early teens I might hit up a different landing page than if I was home visiting the dogs. I don't see any advantage in having the same content, as in "a lot of it" for the same time of day. At least not from an advertising POV. ----- burgerbrain This is...odd. What if the "personalized welcome message" is completely off- topic? ~~~ gulbrandr Great point. We do need to do a bit more testing and, as noted in the video, we're working on this right now. ~~~ omarchowdhury We need to think more about our branding before the idea is launched. It could be an interesting concept. ----- antidaily Google: a personalized experience to drive more traffic to your web site. ----- jf9 Perhaps this isn't allowed on HN?
