I have 2 reserved instances running in my AWS account. When I check my reserved instance details, I see only the current instance status. Is there any way that I can see the status of all my reserved instances? Can we have backup reserved instances in AWS? A: Yes, you can. However, before you start doing that, make sure you know the implications of doing that. You can associate (launch) up to four 3rd party (besides AWS EC2-Classic-Only) instances with your two reserved instances, each of which effectively covers two dedicated cores. This frees up 4% of your 4 CPU-threaded instance's cores, which of course leaves you with one extra 4% of the 2 cores that are taken by the two reserved instances. You can't specify how these 3rd party instances should be licensed. Here's how: Under Instances, click your instance's name, and then click the Launch Method dropdown; Select "3rd Party EC2 Instances" and scroll to the right; Pick an instance you want to associate. ♪ ♪ ♪ LEAVE ME ALONE ♪ ♪ WALK AWAY ♪ ♪ KEEP YOUR
