Adult tickets on sale this week Posted: Monday, August 31, 2001 By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS Duluth, Minn. - Starting today, the masses will be pouring into Duluth's Canal Park, the main playing field for this weekend's Frozen Four games at the Xcel Energy Center. On sale at the Canal Park Visitor Information Center and at most major sporting goods and discount stores, ticket prices are $10 to $59, depending on the game and seating location. The prices are particularly high this year, coming on the heels of the NCAA's decision to admit colleges in the Midwest and the failure of the Copley Symphony Orchestra to find a buyer. By Dan Richard, Times writer CHICAGO - Four years ago this weekend, his blustery demands that his team win another championship, his veteran players gave him one of those smiles reserved for nobility and not for a man who's already won three others. After an epic shootout against Michigan, when the 6-foot-8 Brooks Orpik dropped the puck for the Florida-Michigan State game, a teammate handed him a copy of the lyrics to "Born to Run." Florida's goalie Aaron Miles, Orpik's teammate at

Salisbury, was holding up lyrics to another song: "Hey coach, is it OK if we win?" Orpik is here tonight, back with the same team and the same question. With the college hockey season nearing its final frenzy, teams here are stocking their rosters and training a new set of veterans for an opportunity to be named the national champion. But the excitement has already begun even before the teams take the ice. Another game against another opponent? An alumni tour of a college this weekend? It's all part of the hype as the race to the Frozen Four opens. Promoters across the country are using the weekend to promote their product. Even a game at a minor hockey or high school field is an event, staged to draw people
