The focus of development for FIFA was to improve the flow of the game, optimize the gameplay and enhance the player models, animation and physics of the game. The game engine underwent an overhaul in order to speed up the progress of production and allow the game to be played in real-time. In order to combine the precise gameplay of FIFA with the best-in-class artificial intelligence, next-generation gameplay and animations were used. And with a new player model, animations, controls and physics, the ball felt more responsive in high-speed situations. The introduction of "HyperMotion Technology" will benefit a range of in-game and gameplay enhancements: • Flow-driven game engine In the new game engine, a graph-based system tracks the progress of the ball and determines a player's movement path to create a more realistic and engaging gameplay experience. • New low-latency AI improvements included new behaviour and responses, and more complete and intelligent AI opponent behaviour. • Particle effects A new player model and physics help each player to have their own performance characteristics, ensuring that players who are more physical have more physical reactions. By delivering a more natural and varied experience, physics play a bigger role in the game. • Improved ball physics The game engine has been reworked to facilitate the transition from the current 4.5cm ball diameter to the new 6.0cm ball diameter. FIFA 21 was released on the 9th March 2019 and brought new career modes, new ways to play with the brand new Tactical Free-Kicks, a revamped Training Mode and more.
