4 Ever [Crack] [Mul zipQ: Binary Search for sorted file (that was filtered by password) I'm trying to convert an old script that uses a binary search to find the file that contains a hidden password. My question is about a weird behavior of this script. First i'll explain you the case : I have a file, let's call it "Readme.txt" with a couple of lines, like this (let's call the passwords "1" and "4"): foo 4 1 baz 3 4 I have a script (an executable Bash script) that asks you if you want to verify the password (by pressing Enter). If you pressed Enter, the script prints a "0" and the path to the file containing the password. If you pressed a key like "b", for example, it will print a "1" and the path to the file containing the password. If the file does not contain the password, the script prints a "2" and nothing. If the file contains the password, the script prints a "3" and the path to the password file. This is the script (taken from #!/usr/bin/env bash if [-z "$1"] then if [-f "$2"] then echo
