I have a page with two text boxes and a dropdown list. If I type into the first text box and click on the dropdown list, the second text box gets updated. My question is, how do I get PHP to see that the second text box has been changed? I know it can be done using JS (with a function I wrote), but is there any way that I can make the PHP refresh my view with the new information once the second text box is updated? Thanks in advance! A: If your server is configured to use PHP 5.3, you can use the `$_SESSION`, which is a persistent key/value storage mechanism. `$_SESSION` values can be used programmatically. For example: `session_start(); $_SESSION['foo'] = 1; $_SESSION['bar'] = 1;` It's also possible to access this same mechanism with JavaScript, using the `sessionStorage` and `localStorage` features. For example: `sessionStorage.setItem('foo', 'bar');`

New York Playing in New York: The Ex's
Tuesday, July 13, 2017
New York City is truly unique. It's one of the largest and most diverse cities in the world; it has everything you can imagine. You can travel anywhere on the Big Apple, no matter the season, you'll find something to do. As a performer, this city brings you endless energy, smiles and laughter. It's the perfect place to go to gigs. She brings enthusiasm, audience interaction and a true sense of adventure. It's no secret that NYC performers have an insatiable appetite to showcase their talents and make a name for themselves. Post-show, this city still lives for the party. Whether it's meeting new people, having a drink at trendy bars, or dining at the best restaurants in the world, there is no lack of opportunity to make friends. It's said to be "the town that never sleeps."
