Players now control movement and goal-scoring runs naturally. Shots, passes, dribbles, and saves all showcase an increase in contextual reactivity, and players change direction and movement with greater speed and fluidity. In addition, players will now know where they are on the pitch with the introduction of Full Ground Positioning. FIFA 20 was first to use Player Biotic Attributes, and we've taken that to the next level with the introduction of the FUT Draft Mode in FIFA 22. Players now gain momentum on the pitch, dropping the ball between players and then quickly recovering it in a fluid fashion that captures the impact of an authentic football game. We've also boosted the squad management system with some new features that focus on squad coordination and set up to ensure that a match is consistent and more realistic. Squad management features can be found in the "Squad" in-game menu, as well as manual substitutions and tactical lineups. The new "Tickets" management feature gives managers the option to sell tickets to different segments of the crowd, with the features being the ultimate aim of facilitating interactive experiences for fans and coaches in game. Finally, the new camera positioning feature has been brought in to make crowds seem more authentic and give players a true sense of presence on the pitch. In FIFA 18, game developers focused on replicating an authentic match experience for players by making crowd animations more consistent in speed and motion. In FIFA 22, the goal is to make games more immersive for players by adding more detailed player behavior, including tackling, and motions have been painstakingly recreated to replicate the real life player motions. A new motion capture suit with 22 player-specific markers was used to capture movement, so players had the chance to train and play and showcase their skills and fitness levels. Today we're thrilled to reveal more in-depth details of what the team's been working on for FIFA 22, including the additional features and improvements in game modes. We'll take you through all the new features in the game that take into account feedback from fans and players worldwide. Improving the Realism and Optimizing the

Feel of an Authentic Soccer Match We've used player motion capture to improve gameplay, while also optimizing gameplay for a more authentic and immersive experience. The HyperMotion Technology used in FIFA 22 accurately captures the impact of player movements and animations on
