If you live near one of the few orthopaedic clinics in the world that will perform this surgery -and you're poor- you should thank your stars. In a partnership between the African Orthopaedic Association and the Massachusetts Orthopaedic Society of America, US orthopaedic surgeons perform surgeries free of charge on 100 children in Kenya each year. And I'm helping. This year, I'll be traveling to Kenya with a group of doctors and medical students. After a week-long mission, our team of doctors will go back to Boston and offer free surgeries to poor, but beautiful, African children. I encourage all of you reading this to join in. This is a great cause that you can easily do in a day trip. And if you do donate, tell your friends to do the same. As for me, I'll be trying to heal a small fracture in the tiny two-year-old boy I'll be working on. Patches is a family blog written by a working mom (and former full time PhD student) raising two small children in the shadow of Boston
