Autobiography of a Face "Autobiography of a Face" is a short story by Dashiell Hammett, included in his second book of short stories, which consists mostly of previously unpublished stories. It was first published in the February 1927 issue of Black Mask magazine. Plot summary The story is about an American writer and his lover, who went to France with him. When they arrive at the Parisian train station, he checks the train schedule and realizes that they would arrive too late. Then he notices a man whose face is burned with a cigarette, but it's not his face he's checking. So he takes his lover's purse and checks it, he finds it contains a letter to himself, it's from his lover. After that he realizes his life is in danger, and he decides to move his lover to another city. At the station, he leaves her and goes alone on a train to Paris. And he also doesn't know that the guy at the station is waiting for him to board the train too and it has a gun with it. Characters Ed Lafarge, a writer who travels to Paris for a conference. Rose, his lover. Allusions to actual history, geography and current science The train that Lafarge takes to Paris from Ostend is a Swiss Express on a line on which Déricourt, a key character in Hammett's first novel The Maltese Falcon, is a passenger. Footnotes Category:Short stories by Dashiell Hammett Category:1927 short stories Tularemia in Sweden. Tularemia is a rare zoonosis. In Sweden, as in other industrialized countries, cat and especially dog exposure is of importance for human tularemia. Tularemia is generally a mild disease with a prolonged incubation period. The clinical manifestations are varied, but usually include a transient, flu-like illness, which is accompanied by some degree of malaise, fever, and occasionally by arthralgia, myalgia, neck pain and
