William Saletan: On the right, in a free society and with a free press, campaign finance reform sounds like a good idea The right thing to do is not to let money distort political discourse. That's not the same thing as letting corporations and individuals write campaign checks. There is a good way to reform campaign finance — setting caps on the size of donations, and limiting their recipients to issue-based campaigns — that would not restrict First Amendment rights. In fact, it would increase them. The way a free society works is that people get to decide what they want for themselves; government gets to decide what it thinks will help. But a free society is a society in which freedom is protected. A free society is not a society in which only a few people have money and others have none.

Q: Bash script to find the latest version and update accordingly I have a bash script that sends e-mails with the latest version of an online application based on the number of days since the last upgrade. The script looks like this:
